FOREWORD

Progress—the very essence of living. We must always progress and at intervals must stop to measure our progress, to review what has gone before, and to gain an incentive for future advances. That is what the world is doing this year in A Century of Progress International Exposition at Chicago. For one hundred and fifty days the evidence of the achievements of mankind in the past hundred years will be effectively presented.

In the last century science has entered world industry and wrought wonderful changes in our daily life. At the beginning of this period man groped blindly for those laws which would enable him to mould the forces of Nature to conform to his needs. A terrific struggle has ensued, but today the results are manifested in new means of communication, new modes of transportation, new ways of manufacturing, new weapons for fighting and preventing disease, and new products to add to our comfort, safety, and health.

The exposition will appear as a fascinating encyclopedia "come to life and spread out for all to see." Unparalleled lighting effects, color, and beauty of line are being employed to make this a true picture of modern development.

We, the class of 1933, are expected as true moderns to reflect this progress of mankind, and not only as small parts of the world of today do we at this time stop to measure world progress; but, as individuals about to make a tremendous step forward, leaving our high school days to enter the whirl of industry or to embark upon a search for higher education, we stop to measure our progress, review all that has passed, and gather our ideas for what is to come. Therefore we welcome the opportunity to dedicate our book to A Century of Progress.

The staff feels that this year The Brecky is more nearly a hundred per cent student production than ever before. We are progressing, and as our excellent faculty advisers are already over-burdened, we have tried to give them a "New Deal" in this age of "New Deals". We have tried, too, to give our class a "New Deal" in Breckys. We have worked; we think, not in vain. It has its imperfections; we hope that you will find them over-shadowed by its merits.

TO THE CLASS OF 1933

The class of 1933 is in a certain sense my own class since I, too, entered Central in 1929. Now as one who remains behind when all the rest are leaving, I send my good wishes with you, one and all, and wish you godspeed in your further ventures.

This Year with the Student Council

Mary Lehman, '33

The Student Council of Central High School has really accomplished a great deal during the past year—in spite of the "Depression"! Banks may close, and banks may open, but the work of the Council progresses smoothly. This is due to the unfailing interest and devotion of Miss Rosalie Robinette, sponsor of the Council, to the work of the executives, and, in a large measure, to the whole-hearted cooperation of the members of both the Executive and the General Councils.

Although we have now organized a new system under which in May we elect our executives to serve the following year, and which we believe will facilitate matters, this year's elections went smoothly and Robert Hammerlund and Edna Mae Miller were elected president and vice-president respectively from the groups of candidates. As our vice president was a member of the Mid-Year class, she automatically resigned, and I had the honor of being appointed by Dr. Smith to fill the vacancy.

Although they were instigated in February, 1932, the guardian and coaching systems have been sufficiently successful this year to be regarded as a definite model for school procedures in coming years. Approximately thirty-five freshman have been coached, and twenty-seven of these afterward passed in their failing subjects. For this remarkable record, credit is certainly due to those who gave their time, energy and patience to this work. It is hoped that the seventh semester students will step into vacancies made by June graduates, and push this important work until every rookie coached passes—and we don't think that is hoping for too much.

Another drive sponsored by the Council which was begun last year and which has met with success this year is the "lunch room campaign". You remember, don't you? "Take your tray back"—yes, I thought you would. The point is, Centralites did take their trays back, and did put trash in the waste cans; hence, the reformation of the lunch room.

The boys, better known as cheer leaders, who stood up on the stage during chapels and went through all kinds of contortions in order to induce you to exercise your vocal chords in behalf of dear old Central, were chosen by the Council this year. Our cheers have been a bit lustier, too.

We acquired this year room 313a in which the members of the Council carry on. Only those members of the Council who perpetually slid down hill in the former Council Room, which led to the roof, know what a blessing it is to be on the level again! Heat and ventilation systems were installed in the office during the summer, and a coat of paint was added. Then the search began for furniture. Finally, the necessary desks were found, and now there are even curtains with the initials S. C. sewed in a monogram on them. We do need a picture moulding, and a typewriter badly. You see our bank, too, failed to open. However, we soon expect to buy the other things we need.

An Archives Book with an attractive blue cover is one of the things which was bought this year. In it we are going to keep all the important documents concerning the Council and its work. The Constitution, Point System, and the Method for Awarding Girls "C"s are the present contributions to the pages of the book. It seemed fitting that such a dignified and important body as the Student Council should have some permanent record of its work; so the "Archives" will tell the story.

Miss Robinette says that she looks forward to the time when the Council will do something in a disciplinary line and, perhaps, have a court. This is just a dream, but it will materialize, just as the dream of a Student Council.

Congratulations! Student Council and best wishes for the coming years.

The Bulletin and Review

JAMES RAWLS

OWENITA HARRAH

Earthquakes and jigsaws may rock the country, banks may boom or burst, beer may even be bottled, but the Bulletin, which boasts sixteen years of weekly broadcasting of Central news events, and the REVIEW, modern bi-monthly magazine of forty-six, can comfortably recline until the first issues of next year, and contentedly recall:

For the first time in several years, the number of would-be journalists was so great that three journalism classes were organized under the instruction of Miss Mildred Stallings. It was these students who learned to write, first, the literary articles of the second page; and second, interviews and "third page features". The next, and the most important, thing that they were taught was to develop their "noses for news" to enable them to comb a definitely assigned news "run" and write the facts into a standard "story".

From there, page editors, column editors, headline writers, and typists lent a busy air to the work of compiling the issues in the Publications Office on the regular copy days, Thursday and Friday. On Saturday mornings the "dummies" were pasted up, and the paper printed in the Central print shop in time to appear the next Thursday.

Because of the reorganization of the business department of publications, not enough subscriptions were obtained during the first semester to warrant the Bulletin's entry in the national press association's contests held to criticize and rate high school publications.

But with the second semester came a new business system and headlines which delighted the school. The price of one issue was cut squarely in half, making the paper sell for five cents a copy. Since this gave more students the opportunity to buy, subscriptions soared up and up, setting a new high mark which future business staffs will fight to equal.

The creation of a certain column aided subscriptions. With the first appearance of "Peacock Alley", an exchange for gossip and clever incidents happening to well-known students, readers increased.

Because the Bulletin does take care of all journalistic matter, the REVIEW, on the other hand, is devoted entirely to literary features. It is the only magazine of the kind in Washington. Although many of the stories and plays come from the short story and drama classes, there are no special classes to teach writing for the REVIEW. Stories, poetry, feature articles, book reviews, humorous sketches, and essays are sought from all who love to write.

Mrs. Frances Doggett, faculty adviser for the REVIEW, selects the staff which is to prepare these contributions for publication. The preparation is real work. First, the copy is typed and sent to the printer. He returns it in long duplicate strips, printed "galleys", which are corrected, cut up, and pasted into an old REVIEW, known as the "dummy", in as interesting an arrangement as possible.

Sometimes it is as puzzling as forty jigsaws to make forty pages come out just right. Then the "dummy" is sent to the printer and he returns "page proof" which is corrected by the staff.

At last—the REVIEW bursts forth in all her glory; whereupon quarters tumble around in section rooms to buy her. It is only then that the staff can really appreciate what it has been working over. Miss Summy, faculty adviser for the "art part", has prepared attractive illustrations in linoleum, lithographic-pencil, and ink, which make the magazine an artistic as well as a literary success.

It is a "success", indeed, because the 1932-33 REVIEW was rated "Medalist" (highest honor) in the Columbia Scholastic Press Association contest.

Plays

JOHN SIKKEN

In the past two years dear old Central (long may she wave) has not only held to her usual high standard in the dramatic line but, indeed, in several cases, has rated with the best plays she has ever presented, with all due respect to "Twelfth Night", "Seven Keys to Baldpate", and the "Quality Street" of the past.

We chose for our Fall Play for 1931 "Tweedles", a delightful comedy by Booth Tarkington pertaining to New England life.

I remember that at the try-outs half of those trying out spoke with a distinct Southern drawl instead of the necessary New England dialect. However, with a little study and the aid of Seth Parker, of radio renown, this defect was soon remedied and all the "Tweedles" had the nasal twang down pat.

The first thing brought to mind on looking back on "Tweedles" is Bristol glass. (Which is merely glass made in Bristol, believe it or not, and which makes a very good crash in the second act.) Winsora Tweedle sold this glass, with the help of a number of uncles, aunts, and cousins, and Julian Castlebury bought this glass without the help of his father and mother. Julian, by the way, was portrayed by good old Ted Tiller II,—otherwise known as our THEDORE. (Will they never cease to bring up that boy's name?)

We had plenty of fun, and plenty of credit should go to Miss Orr and Mrs. Gill who directed, and Miss Lent and the stage crew who staged the play.

I presume many have heard, in one way or another, about the 1932 Spring Play, Billy Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream". Frankly—it is one of Central's greatest successes. All the groups necessary to the making of the play cooperated so beautifully that it just had to go over. And go over it did, the Mendelssohn music under the direction of Mr. Wood, contributing in large measure to its success.

Where could we find such a Bottom as Sam Leishear, lovable old Sam. Where would the famous slogan "Keep Kelly off the Horse" be today had not John Kelly fallen off one of the horses while rehearsing in the gym? Where would we find two such fine interpretations of Puck as those of Howard Smith and Romaine Stevens? (She's just hiding under that name. We know it's really Myrtle.) How would we ever have got rid of that terrible Shakespearian curtain if it had not been imperative to do so for the action of this play? It may have been a fine curtain in its time. We grant you that. But its time had passed and it was nothing more than an eyesore and a nuisance. The huge hole which loomed out from the center of the curtain was an ideal place for hands to grope out and for eyes to peer, hawk-like, at the audience. This could not have kept on much longer! I never will forget the surprise and relief that overwhelmed me the day I saw the brown velvet curtain stretched across the stage. It was a pleasure just to stand and look at it. The fold in the middle was ideal for Puck's entrance for his famous curtain speech "If we shadows have offended." Puck's chief worry, though, was wending his way back through the opening after the speech was over. The opening always seemed miraculously to seal itself after Robin had stepped on to the apron. Let it suffice to say that he always made it quite successfully at the performances, which is all that matters.

Four performances of this masterpiece of Shakespeare were given instead of the usual two, but even then the cast was sorry when it was over. However, the play so securely fixed in the minds of some that they even wrote parodies on it.

Mid-Year Class History

LORRAINE E. CRAIG

"Little by little the race is run,
Trouble and sorrow and toil are done."

This is now true of our 1933 class.

Four years ago we entered Central, a group of puzzled and awed rookies. After a few weeks of wandering about, rushing up the wrong side of the stairway, seemingly lost in this strange big building, we settled down and watched the upperclassmen uphold Central's standards. It was during this year that we saw our band place first, that Company C brought second place for the fifth successive time to Central, that the Boys' rifle team won the District and National High School championship, and that for the third consecutive year the National title was awarded to our Girls' rifle team. This same year our swimming team went splashing through to the A. A. U. District championship. In the autumn of 1929 our class had the added pleasure of welcoming a new principal to Central, Dr. Harvey A. Smith.

Reaching the lofty rank of Sophomores we were desirous of impressing upon the new members of our class, the incoming junior high school pupils, our superiority. Yes, with a domineering air, we made the freshmen understand that they were merely humble subjects. Entering this term into the literary and athletic fields of our school life, we felt that it was partly due to us that Companies C and A were awarded second and third places respectively, in the annual competitive drill, that the colonelcy was for the fifth successive time bestowed upon Central, and that the band again placed first. This same year, 1930, the Spring Play, "Baby Cyclone", and the Fall Play, "Pinafore", were received by the faculty and student body with a great deal of enthusiasm.

Now, the class was at another February, an outstanding one, for we were upperclassmen. As never before did we wish to show that we were equal to the trust which Central places on her upper-semester pupils. With keen interest we watched our basketball team mount to a tie for the championship, and saw our Bulletin and Review attain first award in the National Scholastic Press Association Contest. Indeed, 1931 was our banner year! For it was then that Company A, with a rating of 98.9 gained first honors. Our class deeply felt this honor, for many of those boys who helped to make the company the best in five High Schools are members of this group.

We were now at the last milestone of our High School career. Seniors! In the Spring "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was presented by the students of the school. The Fall play was "The Perfect Alibi". We say, with pardonable pride that we helped to inaugurate a new plan of student government, that of having the entire school elect the president and vice-president, thus testing the ability of the student-body to participate in the management of certain phases of school life. We are gratified that this student-council is successfully taking care of conditions in the lunch-room and helping the younger students to adapt themselves to school life:two projects that we set out to accomplish.

Fellow classmates, our High School career is ended. It seems but yesterday that we were saying "Hail"; tonight we are saying "Farewell". All of those searching examinations in Burke, in Carlyle, in Trig., and in Economics, all that weighing of credits, all that suspense over grades is completed. We have passed the test. Tonight, we are ready to leave Central, and we believe that we are taking away her noblest ideals. In class-room and library, in corridors and on the athletic field she has offered us things of the mind, body, and spirit. It is only by carrying forward with steadfast and intelligent efforts that we can develop these capabilities. Good citizenship, integrity of character, and a spirit of loyalty and service, fellow classmates, are the responsibilities of our High School career.

With these feelings in mind, Dr. Smith, and the faculty, we, the Mid-Year class of 1933, are bidding you an affectionate farewell.

Mid-Year Valedictory

JOSEPH GOLDMAN

Faculty, friends, and fellow classmates:

As we, the members of the mid-year graduating class of Central High School, meet here this evening, for the last time, we find ourselves overwhelmed by conflicting emotions.

On the one hand, it is with deep regret that we find it necessary to sever our associations with the faculty, and our friendships with each other. We have a feeling of sincere gratitude for our teachers who have for the past years so well guided us to our aim. On the other hand, it is with pride that we realize that our goal of four years ago has been reached, and we are aware that we have gone one step farther on our path towards becoming citizens of our country. Such an achievement as this, in itself, is noteworthy.

It was in this identical auditorium that we were first welcomed. At that time, to have pictured ourselves as we are tonight would have been utterly beyond our timid minds. In retrospection, we realize what a difficult task confronted us, for indeed it was difficult in comparison with what we had just completed, that of junior high school work. The steady ascent toward our end was a patchwork of joys and obstacles combined, but we did our best to overcome the obstacles and make our life full of joys alone.

Here, at Central, our time has been spent not only in the furtherance of academic standards, but in other fields as well. From Central's earliest history, there have existed these activities, which have become an essential part of the school curriculum. Through the medium of these organizations, we feel that we have obtained, to a degree, a tenacity of purpose, a reasonable amount of self control, and a loyal obedience. Such a wealth of physical and moral development could never have been achieved, had not these organizations run concurrently with the academic courses.

As we look about the world of affairs in which we are to make our appearance, the picture that we behold is not a pleasant one. Economic distress prevails throughout the world, and in two continents, furious war is being waged. We have thought that we were studying civilization, but as we view existing conditions, we pause and wonder whether what we see may be truly characterized as progress. For the moment, we can be expected to do little more than wonder. But we must resolve to watch, and try to understand, to prepare ourselves for the time when the solution of the great problems of the world will be the task of our own generation.

In considering our own country, we find it less inviting than that of the past. It is no ordinary struggle that confronts us. Disorder reigns. Unemployment is general. Old political and economic remedies have proved inadequate. Fellow classmates! in the midst of such trying conditions, I am pleading with you tonight, for the benefits of our high school career at their very best, for with all Central's glorious history, our class should represent the best product that she has yet sent forth. Indeed, we, her youngest children, are the result of the long years that lie behind her. Our country has the right to expect our best efforts. Shall we not then, as we stand here this evening, pledge ourselves to exert all our powers, to fight fairly and fiercely, in the belief that determination to win is the greater part of success! Central, we bid you farewell.

Mid-Year Class Poem

MARGARET STRONG

Ahead, stretching into the future,
Is our life, upon which we embark
Without knowing what may befall us,
As a blind man gropes in the dark.

Before us lie uncharted waters.
Are they deep? Are they shallow? who knows?
We meet not a calm but a whirlwind
Till we learn what experience shows.

Can our youth withstand all the hardships,
The failures in striving for right,
All the sorrow and pain the world brings us,
And still keep our souls and hearts light?

Youth faces the world with ideals,
High ambition, undaunted by fears.
The world suffers Youth's restless spirit
And it counsels Youth's unheeding ears.

We face a world full of problems.
Shall we solve them in peace or in strife?
Time only can give us the answer.
In the future before us lies—Life!

June Class History

STEPHEN B. LEE

Four years well spent. Four years during which Central tradition has moulded our character and ideals. We have become older and wiser, only to find that we are still without age or wisdom. Life-long friendships have been formed, and many pictures have been hung in the corridors of our memories. This is the log of the days spent by the class of Thirty-three at Central. Let it stimulate the memory of four years well spent!

As we are gathered together for the last time, memory takes us back to the days of September, 1929. It was then that most of us arrived at Central, starting our high school career under the new administration of Dr. Harvey A. Smith, now well-loved by all Centralites. At first merely raw rookies, we gradually settled down to give support to a cadet corps which came through with first honors in the band competition, second and third in the company competitive drill, and second in the battalion contest. The colonelcy was won by Central for the fifth consecutive year. Our publications, the Bulletin and the REVIEW, received first class honor ratings, and the girls' rifle team gained the national championship title.

On re-entering the next autumn, we found our number increased by many new recruits from junior high schools. It was this year that we saw our school distinguished athletically for the first time since our registration. This honor came when our basketball team gained a tie for the championship. To round out a successful year, Company "A" won the company competitive drill with the high rating of 98.9%. We also gained first honors in the battalion contest.

It was as juniors that so many of our number settled down to working with serious thought of the future, and won recognition through attaining membership in the National Honor Society. This year, also, the new system of Student Government replaced the old Junior and Senior Councils. The success of this step has already been widely noted and acclaimed. In athletics, the swimming team came out with the D. C. A. A. U. championship and the coveted South Atlantic title. Our cadets again covered themselves with glory by winning the band contest and placing second in the battalion competition. For the spring play, we took on the ambitious task of presenting a Shakespearian comedy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream", which was adjudged a huge success. The track team gained fame by winning the District championship.

And now we pass to the senior season, with all its honors and happiness. In athletics, we have been extremely fortunate, with a clear basketball title and a repetition of last year's South Atlantic swimming victory. The cadets have won second place in the regimental drill and have given us the third place battalion. The newly reorganized lacrosse team has many triumphs to its credit, and the girls' rifle team has for the seventh time taken the national championship. Our golf, tennis, track, and baseball teams are under full steam and bid fair to win more laurels for the school.

We have our faculty to thank for many victories, for they have lent us the untiring devotion to our activities which only intense interest can foster. It is only proper to include in a narration of our successes a mention of those who made them possible.

These gains, coupled with many minor and individual triumphs, constitute the history of the June Class of 1933—an eventful four years indicative of our future successes, and altogether interesting and enjoyable! We can only wish for future classes even greater triumphs, as we join the ranks of the Alumni of Central High School.

PRYTANEION FIRE

HELEN BINKLEY

About to leave these long-familiar halls
To find our futures where our fates may lead,
The flame, that here we kindled, flickers, falls;
Our fires-to-be lie in the dark beyond.

We face this darkness, unaware of gloom,
Sensing its breadth, its freedom, and its hope,
Our hands hold torches; now strange shadows loom,
Shapes of our futures wrought by moving light.

For each, in his own way, has made his own
All that he wished for of our common fire:
Self-knowledge, love of truth, of heights unknown,
Kindled in its degree each shimmering flame.

Our joys, our hopes, our search for Beauty here
Made high and radiant the fire that glowed
On our school's altar. Ever, year on year,
The torch we carry shines more purely bright.

June Class Valedictory

James A. Marks

Of all important times in the lives of the members of the 1933, June graduating class, tonight is the most important. We are modestly proud of our achievements and sorrowful over our departure from Central. We find ourselves greatly troubled by overwhelming problems looming up before us.

All over the country today, from coast to coast, are evidences of a great nation's suffering. A world-wide reaping seems to be taking place; a reaping of the disastrous harvest sprung from seeds of thoughtlessness and selfishness, sown so carelessly in past years. Stunned and oppressed by existing circumstances, men are asking themselves, "Why do such conditions exist? Why is the world in such turmoil? Why are men hungry in the midst of plenty? Why was there work for all in the busy world only yesterday, while today unemployed thousands tramp the streets?"

We must accept these appalling problems as our heritage even though we stand aghast before them. We cannot find a solution for them in the past; the past has never known such conditions. Neither may we stand foolishly by and do nothing. Nature has made man with a will to conquer obstacles. In such a crisis as this we must strain our powers to the utmost.

We must try to realize the seriousness of the situation and shoulder our responsibility as future citizens. In attacking these problems that confront us, we can make use of the training we have been given in Central. We have been taught that we must master facts, look at both sides of a question, think for ourselves, cooperate with others, and maintain a standard based on self-respect, reliability, and honor. Through our participation in the government of our school we have gained a sense of justice and responsibility. Our experience in athletics and on the military field has taught us discipline, military courtesy, and sportsmanship. Our Honor Society has held up to us the highest ideals in scholarship, service, and leadership. We are thankful for this training; we can ask no more in the way of equipment.

We know that great adjustments will be necessary in the world. Science points to what man has attained by the use of his creative mind and beckons us to still greater achievements.

Experience has taught us that it is often darkest before the dawn and that mankind has made its greatest progress in the face of seemingly unsurmountable difficulties. What wonderful marvels may be just beyond our present barriers! Who knows but that the fog of confusion will soon roll back and reveal a shining new era to a despairing earth!

My classmates, it is probable that such things will come to pass if we are "steadfast of purpose"; it lies within our power to mould our future just as the potter moulds his clay. I firmly believe that we must face the future determined to be victorious. As we leave Central, we promise to do our best to render such service to the world as will reflect honor upon the school that now bids us farewell.

JUNIORS

A Junior Has His Say

FRANK C. STETSON, '34

There is really very little use in a Junior's writing an editorial, since most of you graduates will be too busy admiring your photographs to waste your time on this work of literary art. But since this space must be filled, the Juniors of Central High School, heirs apparent to your soon-to-be-vacated thrones (unless there are some last minute casualties in the shape of failures) wish to extend commendations for your past deeds and best wishes for the future.

As the future is, at best, uncertain and entirely within your hands, we will have to confine our comments to the past. First, let us consider sports. Omitting football for reasons well known to you, we pass to the more successful basketball team. There indeed did you set an enviable record of consecutive victories, and one which we Juniors will have a hard time beating.

The cadet corps has not covered itself with as much glory as might have been possible, yet it has not been wholly unsuccessful, and the major competition of the year is yet to be decided.

Your student council has been very prominent in managing our school life and has given us a government which left nothing to be desired.

Socially, also, there is little that even a hypercritical Junior may complain about.

As far as scholarship is concerned, your large membership in the National Honor Society is a most convincing argument in your favor. Besides, we are sure that any "F's" were caused by the teacher's gross misunderstanding (?) of you rather than by any inability on your part.

Since the class of 1934 has nothing but good will to wish its predecessors, it would perhaps be unwise to leave you with the over-inflated ego which reading this has undoubtedly inspired. Therefore, as you become rookies (My! How distasteful and disagreeable that word sounds!—We might at least have said "freshman"!) in the world of business or in college, we wish you, in your mind's eye, to picture us, the poor, despised Juniors, as the "gens superior" of the school, reaping still more glories for Central.

JUNIOR HIGH-LIGHTS

FEBRUARY

The "click" of skates against the glass-smooth ice;
The bracing wind and faces all aglow;
The silver of the world on winter's morn;
The dash; the whirl; the sting of flying snow;
The merriness and fun and happy laughter
That rings out clear against the frosty sky—
The snappiness and youth's undaunted spirit;
Thus February blusters madly by!

JUNE

June! In just a few more days
Books slam shut with joyful crack
And locker doors swing freely back.
Fresh-washed and bare are empty halls
With echoes ringing from the walls.
A janitor, the last who leaves,
Lonely, clanks his heavy keys,
And Central stands, cold, grim, and still,
Predominant upon her hill.

QUALITY ENDURES

PERHAPS, many years hence, you will have the occasion to look through these pages and again will see this advertisement.

We, your printers, are confident that on this occasion, your BRECKY will compare most favorably with its appearance when it left the press, fresh and new, in June, 1933.

Telephone us and tell us how it has withstood the wear and tear of the passing years —and better still, call upon us to assist you in your printing problems and let us resume the pleasant relations that started 'way back in 1933.

They were given such titles as "A Midsummer Night's Scream", and "A Mid-Winter's Nightmare". An example of how the beautiful lines of Shakespeare were murdered was when Egeus says to the Duke—"Full of vexation come I with complaint against my child, my daughter Hermia," changed to—"Full of vaccination come I with a gripe against me kid, me datter Hoimia."

Time passed until the Fall brought another artistic success to add to Central's long list. This time it was a mystery play by A. A. Milne, "The Perfect Alibi", known in England as "The Fourth Wall". This fourth wall is the audience, of course, who, after seeing a murder committed in the first act, observes how the characters in the play unravel the mystery. And how they do unravel it! Susan, played by Romaine Stevens, unravels the mystery very neatly with the help of Jimmy Ludgrove, nephew of the murdered man.

Mrs. Gill, who had helped Miss Orr in producing plays in the past, withdrew from this work which was very ably taken in hand by Miss Florence Murray who assisted in the fall and spring play this year.

The spring of 1933 brought back to Central Sir James Barrie's wonderful play, "Quality Street" which had been enacted years ago in Central. This charming play, with its quaint ladies who lived on "Quality Street", has a strong human appeal which was transported across the footlights into the hearts of the audience. Phoebe, the heroine of the play, was beautifully done by Adele Whiteside, who had made her debut as Helena in "A Midsummer Night's Dream".

I think that none of us will ever forget "Quality Street". I know that I shall not.

And so four more plays have become a part of Central's history. Two of them, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Quality Street", will go down in her annals as real works of art. We feel that we are leaving a good record behind us, and we are proud of it.

"The joys I have possess'd are ever mine;
Out of thy reach, behind eternity,
Hid in the sacred treasure of the past,
But bless'd remembrance brings them hourly back."

BON VOYAGE?

Anticipation

A sky of deep and burning blue—
A white ship on a sparkling sea—
You feel the touch of flying spray
And salt winds blowing, wild and free.

Reality

The pale sky turns a watery hue
To match the endless, heaving sea,
And you rush headlong to your berth,
As miserable as you can be!

TRIALS OF A NATURE LOVER

I love the Summer landscape—
Each flower and stream and tree,
A field of fragrant clover
And gold-striped bumble-bee.

Each year, I hab hay-fever,
I'b a sorry sight to see—
I lub the sbell of clover,
Bud id doesd't care for be!
